

Privacy Policy

Miriam Cohen's Secrets of Romantic Fairy Tales Blog (The Blog) is sensitive to the privacy needs of its visitors and correspondents (“you” or “users”). This privacy policy applies to any personal information collected through The Blog and discloses the privacy practices for all communications, products and services of The Blog and its Creator, including any type of identification information disclosed explicitly or implicitly to the Creator in communications via various means, including, but not limited to the designated email address, comments areas, or testimonials.

This privacy policy does not apply to other websites, including those that may be accessed through links contained on The Blog. This privacy policy does not apply to other online or offline activities of Advertisers, Sponsors, Partners, and/or Affiliates and does not apply to any information you supply to Blog through any means other than indicated on this Blog.

Collection of Personal Information

If the Blog offers certain optional online tools such as feed subscriptions, shares, contests, polls, tell-a-friend, etc., it will require users to register or to subscribe in order to enable the utilization of these tools of The Blog. In these, always optional, cases The Blog may collect personal information such as your name, e-mail address, mailing address, and phone number to send notifications related to The Blog's services.

Consent and Security

It is your choice whether or not you provide your registration information to The Blog, but registration some or all information is required in order for The Blog to provide you with the online tools that require registration.

Cookies and Log Files

The Blog's is hosted by Verisign and powered by WordPress. They may or may not place a text file called a “cookie” in the browser files of your computer. Cookies can be used to provide you with tailored information from The Blog. You can set your browser to notify you when you receive a cookie, giving you the chance to decide whether or not to accept it. WordPress also records information that your web browser sends whenever you visit any website, such as your Internet Protocol address.

The Blog uses a variety of technical tools provided by WordPress and third parties for tracking purposes. The Creator uses these tools to analyze the traffic patterns on The Blog, such as the frequency with which our users visit various parts of The Blog. These technical methods and tools may involve the transmission of information either directly to us or to another party authorized by us to collect information on our behalf. Information from use of these technical methods and tools may be collected by the third parties in a form that is personally identifiable.

Use of Personal Information

The Blog guarantees that none of the personal and registration information collected within the Blog or by authorized third parties is ever publicly displayed within the Blog or used for any kind of monetary gains.

The Blog will never use email addresses to send information with updates about the Blog without first asking its users to opt into such feature on The Blog. Even after opting in, users may choose to stop receiving emails at any time by following the links contained within the emails to Unsubscribe.

User-Generated Content

Any material that you voluntarily post to Comments or any other public discussion areas can be accessed by the public and can in turn be used by those people to send you unsolicited communications. You are solely responsible for the content of any material you post.

Disclosure or Sharing of Information

Except as otherwise described in this privacy statement, The Blog will not disclose personal information to any third party unless we believe that disclosure is necessary: (1) to conform to legal requirements or to respond to a subpoena, search warrant or other legal process received by The Blog, whether or not a response is required by applicable law; (2) to enforce The Blog Terms & Conditions Agreement or to protect The Creator's (Miriam Cohen's) rights; or (3) to protect the safety of members of the public and users of The Blog. The Blog reserves the right to transfer personal information to a successor in interest that acquires rights to that information as a result of the transfer of the proprietary rights to The Blog to that successor in interest.

Use of Usage Information

Your usage information in statistical form may be disclosed internally within The Blog and in aggregated impersonal form to third parties. For example, The Blog may disclose usage information in order to better understand which parts of The Blog users are visiting with the purpose of improving The Content of The Blog, and for marketing, advertising, or research purposes.

Third-party Advertisers, Links to Other Sites

The Blog may allow advertising services companies to serve advertisements within The Blog. Advertising may be based on usage, text, demographic, or other information gathered by or on behalf of The Blog. The Blog's Privacy Policy does not apply to, and we cannot control, the activities of advertisers.

This Privacy Policy applies only to The Blog, and not to any other websites to which The Blog may link.

Surveys and Contests

The Blog may invite users to participate in surveys or contests. User's participation in these surveys or contests is completely voluntary. The information collected from surveys and contests may be used to identify aggregate demographic characteristics of users to improve our readership, for marketing purposes, for industry reporting purposes, and/or to notify the winners and award prizes. Subject to the user's preferences, such information also may be shared with third-party sponsors of such surveys or contests.

Our Commitment To Children's Privacy

Protecting the privacy of children and young adults is especially important. For that reason, The Blog does not knowingly collect or maintain personally identifiable information or non-personally-identifiable information on The Blog from persons under 18 years of age, and no part of The Blog is directed to persons under 18. In accordance with The Blog's Terms & Conditions Agreement all users must be over the age of 18. If you are under 18 years of age, then please do not use or access The Blog at any time or in any manner. If The Blog learns that personally identifiable information of persons under 18 years of age has been collected through The Blog without verified parental consent, then The Blog will take appropriate steps to delete this information.

Your California Privacy Rights

California Civil Code Section 1798.83 as applicable permits customers who are California residents to request certain information regarding the disclosure of personal information to third parties for their direct marketing purposes. To make such a request, please send an e-mail to miriam.cohen.media@gmail.com.

Effective Date

This Privacy Policy is effective as of July 8, 2024 and will remain in effect unless changed. The Blog may modify this Privacy Policy at any time, and such modifications shall be effective immediately upon posting of the modified Privacy Policy on The Blog's website.